INTRODUCTION

The Association of American Medical Colleges (AAMC) periodically publishes a report which describes the composition of salaried faculty within basic and clinical science departments of U.S. medical schools by sex and ethnicity. The report provides a national assessment of the participation of women and minorities on medical school faculties and is used by medical school administrators and federal agencies as a guide to human resource planning.

The information contained in these publications is based on voluntary reports to the AAMC by staff at the medical schools. Changes in the status of faculty are submitted through a standard reporting form. These data are maintained in a computer-based information and retrieval system, the Faculty Roster.

Since its inception in 1966, the Faculty Roster has been supported by the National Institutes of Health or another component of the Public Health Services, the Department of Health and Human Services, and the AAMC.

The number of salaried faculty members represented in the database has grown from 40,578 in 1975 to 52,464 in 1985, a 28.8 percent increase in the past decade. During this period of time the number of female faculty has increased from 6,119 (15.1 percent of faculty) to 9,287 (17.7 percent of faculty).

Although the number of underrepresented minority faculty increased from 1,096 in 1975 to the current 1,444, there has been no significant change in representation. Changes in degree type and departmental representation are shown in the discussion section of this report.

Since 1975, the number of medical schools has increased from 116 to 127. The 11 new schools are in addition to 21 schools that developed between 1968 and 1974. This 33.7 percent increase in the number of medical schools arose in response to the nation's health manpower needs. In reviewing the legislation which precipitated this change, Donald Fredrickson, M.D. the former director of NIH, stated ". . . a growing concern over an impending shortage of physicians generated pressures that led to the enactment of two primary means of federal support - The Health Professions Assistance Act in 1965 and the Health Manpower Act of 1968. This federal funding resulted in an unprecedented expansion of facilities for training health professional manpower."[1]

The effects of the 1964 Civil Rights Act and Title IX of the Educational Amendments of 1972, which reduced the barriers for women and minorities entering the medical profession, are reflected in this report. It is important to keep in mind however, that three to six post-MD years may be spent satisfying additional training requirements for a faculty appointment. The time involved in training prior to eligibility for a faculty position should be considered when assessing changes in medical school faculty composition.

The AAMC initiated this national report in 1975 to assist medical schools in constructing affirmative action plans. It has been published approximately every three years and displays the sex and ethnic composition of faculty on a departmental basis.

Enhancements to the Report

In this report, the fourth in the series, additional data have been incorporated in response to requests by affirmative action officers at the schools. Distribution factors have been included to reflect the primary rank of faculty in addition to the previously reported categories of highest degree, sex, and ethnic self-description of full-time faculty members.

Tables which display the tenure status of faculty within these categories have also been included. Tenure information has been collected for the past seven years, but during that period the method of collection was revised several times. A considerable number of schools have been reluctant to provide these data due to the changing nature of tenure policies at their institutions or the reporting burden posed by an item that affects such a large number of faculty records. Section III presents the summary distribution of faculty by tenure categories: tenured, on tenure track, and not on tenure track. These figures should be used with caution as they are only a broad reflection of this distribution.

The discussion section, which precedes the statistical body of the report, includes text and tables describing trends in the composition of faculty over the past decade and, where appropriate, changes that have occurred over the past six years. This section also includes an examination of the differences that may exist in faculty composition at the newly developed schools (since 1968) and at the established schools.

Statistical Data

Statistical data for this report are presented in several parts. A discussion section, which precedes the main body of statistical tables, presents trend data on the changing composition of the faculty, differences which may exist at developing and established schools, rank achievement by sex and ethnic group, and tenure status of faculty.

Section I of the statistical body of this report consists of a series of tables that display the distribution of all full-time faculty within each of the primary departments by sex and ethnic self-description.

The departmental data are displayed in identical format for Table I and Table II, beginning with the primary basic science departments. These primary departments are followed by a departmental category labelled "other basic." This category reflects combined numbers of faculty in smaller departments as designated by the medical schools. A listing of the titles of the departments included in this "other basic" category is in Appendix 2.

Data for the clinical departments are displayed in an identical manner with a description of the titles of smaller departments subsumed under the heading "other clinical."

Non-basic and non-clinical departments are grouped under the heading "other departments." This section includes the following categories: veterinary science; other health professions; dentistry; social science; and administration. A designation of "all other" departments included in this section combines numbers of faculty in remaining departments. A listing to identify the types of department titles that are included in this category is also in Appendix 2.

Tables I and II in Section I display rank distribution by degree in both aggregate and departmental format by sex and ethnic self-description. All schools are included in Table I. Table II presents data for faculty at Howard University School of Medicine, Meharry Medical College and Morehouse Medical College. Table III is a summary of faculty by degree type at schools in Puerto Rico. A departmental detail of rank, degree and ethnic self-description for faculty at these two schools may be obtained by writing AAMC.

A greater number of Puerto Ricans receive faculty appointments at institutions in the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico than in the rest of the United States. A similar appointment pattern occurs for blacks at Howard, Meharry and Morehouse. Although these institutions reflect atypical appointment patterns for minority faculty, a description of the representation of minorities in academic medicine would be incomplete without them. Providing separate tables allows for a more accurate computation of the participation of minorities in other medical schools as the figures in Tables II and in summary Table III may be subtracted from the aggregate data reported in Table I.

Section II provides an overview or rank status for faculty by degree, sex and ethnic group according to year of first appointment. Table IV presents the data for all schools. Tables V and VI depict the data for newly developed schools (accredited after 1967) and established schools (accredited before 1968).

Section III summarizes tenure status by rank, sex and ethnic group in aggregate format (Table VII), for newly developed schools (Table VIII), and for established schools (Table IX).

Summary data for faculty in each of the four regions of the U.S. are contained in Section IV (Tables X-XIII). Medical schools may request a separate report of their faculty, by department and in summary form, for comparison to the regional and national data.

Tables and figures in the discussion section are identified by Arabic numerals; tables in Sections I-IV are identified by Roman numerals. Appendices are provided for the baseline data, the Faculty Roster collection instrument, and listings of "other basic," "other clinical" and departments subsumed under the heading "other departments."

Data Source

The source of data for this series of reports is the AAMC Faculty Roster, a computer-based information system of individual faculty records. There are currently 127 accredited and provisionally accredited U.S. medical schools, including three schools in the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico. Data for all schools except one (in Puerto Rico) are maintained on the Roster through voluntary participation by the medical schools.

Maintenance of the Faculty Roster is a continuous process with daily updating of faculty records. In a typical month over 2,500 records are received from the schools and processed -- to add new faculty appointments, to update current records, or to transfer the records of faculty who have terminated to an "inactive" file. In June 1985, the database held records for 52,464 full-time faculty, 2,515 records for faculty with part-time appointments (maintained for only fifteen of the schools), and 58,405 records for individuals who previously held a faculty appointment.

Information on faculty is forwarded to the AAMC through a coordinated effort. A staff member at each medical school is assigned responsibility for this reporting. This responsibility is frequently assigned to the dean of faculty affairs or in some instances to an administrative unit in the office of the dean of the medical school. The individuals assigned this responsibility are referred to as "Faculty Roster Representatives." These representatives attend periodic regional workshops, conducted by the AAMC staff, to ensure standard reporting procedures for all schools.

Addition of newly appointed faculty to the database is accomplished through the distribution and collection of a standard form developed by the AAMC. This form is completed by all faculty receiving their first full-time appointment and forwarded, through the school representative, to staff at the AAMC for editing and entering into the system.

The Faculty Roster form requests background demographic data, including ethnic self-description[2], current appointment information, previous professional employment, and education and training history. The unique identifying element for each individual is the social security number.

Upon entry of the data to the Faculty Roster, a computer-generated printout of the record is returned to the school. This printout contains two sections. One section displays the data reported to the Roster and the other is a blank form that may be used for updating the information.

This report is based on information contained in the Faculty Roster pertaining to full-time faculty members as of June 30, 1985. The previous report, published in 1982, also reported data for full-time faculty only, but earlier reports in 1975 and 1978 included some faculty with part-time appointments. Since over 85 percent of the salaried faculty are full-time and only a fraction of the schools report part-time faculty members, maintaining data on part-time faculty has been discontinued, except in a few special cases.

The sources of data for baseline statistics (Appendix 1) are the U.S. Department of Commerce, Bureau of the Census, and the National Residency Matching Program.

Major Study Variables

The Faculty Roster system is designed to record data for full-time salaried faculty on an individual basis. The variables include name, sex, ethnic self-description, current citizenship, rank, department, degree, institution and year of degree, specialty, field of study, and previous employment information. The system has the ability to maintain 182 items of information for each faculty members.

For this report, the key variables are sex and ethnic self-description. As distribution by sex and minority group differ significantly according to department, the study uses degree type and department as control variables. In addition, as the availability pool of faculty for consideration in planning affirmative action goals may vary by rank, this variable has been added to the report.

[2] Prior to 1977, the Faculty Roster employed a more detailed ethnic/racial classification. The categories in use since 1977 conform to those used by the U.S. government.

A table prepared by the National Residency Matching Program (Appendix 1) examines the characteristics of the availabilty pool. Based on data from the class of 1984, this table displays the sex and ethnic composition of individuals with MD degrees by the specialty program in which they are entered.[3]

The percentage of individuals in any given specialty program who enter academic medicine upon completion of their training is not currently available by sex and ethnic group. These data will be available in the near future through a newly developed information tracking system at AAMC, the Student and Applicant Information Management System. Analysis of the available data, however, indicates that approximately 16 percent of persons in a medical school graduation class enter academic medicine at some time in their careers.[4]

The number of graduates of medical schools in the United states by ethnic representation (1975-1984)[5], graduates of medical schools in the United States by sex (1930-1983)[6], and the total population of the United States by ethnic group from the 1980 census[7] are presented in Appendix 1.

Limitations of The Study

The Faculty Roster System is maintained by continuous updating of faculty records and thus is never considered perfectly complete. As the accuracy of the system depends on timely record submissions on a voluntary basis from the medical schools, this goal is imperfectly achieved. However, a survey of the accuracy and completeness of the Faculty Roster, conducted in 1977, and an assessment of the accuracy and completeness of the Faculty Roster for departments of medicine at 11 selected schools prepared in 1983, determined the overall accuracy rate of critical demographic items to be at least 97.7 percent.

The study does not include faculty who have left full-time status during the past decade. The number of former faculty in the database has almost tripled, from 19,325 in 1975 to 58,405 currently. It would be interesting to analyze the accession and attrition of this group by their sex ethnicity.

DISCUSSION

Total Faculty

During the past three years, the number of full-time faculty records in the database has increased from 47,701 to 52,464. This ten percent increase is less than that which occurred between 1978 and 1982 when the increase was nearly 16 percent. Some 16.3 percent of all faculty were female in 1982. In 1985 they were 17.7 percent, a change of 1.4 percentage points. This rate of increase is a continuing trend, beginning with the three-year time period, 1978-1982, when for the first time the percentage of women increased by more than one percentage point.

The number of female faculty hired during these periods of time has also continued to increase, growing from nearly 24 percent of new faculty during 1978-1982 to slightly less than 31 percent during the past three years.

The same cannot be said for underrepresented minority faculty members as their total representation has remained fairly constant during the past decade. The number of women in the group of underrepresented minority faculty, however, has more than doubled during the decade.

Changes in Faculty Composition

Degree Type

Although the percentage of full-time faculty represented by women has shown an overall increase from 15.1 in 1975 to its current high of 17.7 percent, this representation is not evenly distributed among degree types.

Several tables in this section display the relationship of sex and ethnic group to faculty changes in degree composition over the past decade. Tables 1-4 present the overall degree distribution of all faculty for the 1975-1985 period, the degree distribution for underrepresented minority groups and for the Asian and Other Hispanic groups. Table 5 summarizes the representation of female faculty for the past decade, by ethnic group and degree type.

While the majority (66.3 percent) of full-time faculty members hold MD degrees, women comprise only 13.7 percent of this group. Women continue to be more heavily represented among those who hold PhDs or other health doctorates. This group constitutes 27.1 percent of all full-time faculty, of which women make up 20.1 percent.

In 1975, some 65.4 percent of all full-time faculty held MD or MD/PhD degrees. At that time, however, female faculty members only comprised 9.9 percent of this group. The percentage of total faculty with PhD/OHD degrees has remained quite steady (27.1 percent vs. 26.1 percent), however, women faculty have increased their representation in this group from 15.1 percent in 1975 to 20.1 percent currently. Table 1 details the changes in faculty composition by degree type over the past decade.

Women faculty no longer represent a majority of the faculty without doctorates, having declined from 54.6 percent of this group in 1975 to a current level of 48.2 percent. As this category includes faculty whose degree may be unknown, one may not assess whether this decrease is due to women entering faculty positions with higher credentials than previously or whether the number of women whose degree was unknown has decreased. Further evidence of the representation of women in the non-doctoral fields is shown by ethnic group in Tables 4 and 5. This category of faculty only represents 6.6 percent of the total.

The number of underrepresented minority faculty has increased from 1,097 in 1975 to 1,444, a 31.6 percent growth in the past decade. This growth, however, has only translated to a one percentage point gain relative to all U.S. medical school faculty.

It may be surprising to find that the American Indian ethnic group has grown by the greatest percentage, increasing from 14 in 1975 to 37 in 1982, and to 47 in 1985 (Table 2).

Mexican-American faculty have had the second highest numerical growth with a 93.2 percent increase since 1975. The number of Mexican-Americans at both the MD level and the "other" degree level has more than doubled while there has been a 31.8 percent increase in the number of Mexican-American faculty with PhDs or OHDs. However, as Table 4 shows, this increase has not translated to an overall increase in the representation of this ethnic group.

Black faculty members have increased by 29.6 percent over this same period of time with their greatest increase, 52.8 percent, shown at the MD level. Table 2 shows that female black faculty have contributed the most to this gain in black MD representation.

The changes which have occurred for faculty members of the "Other Hispanic" and Asian groups are shown in Table 3.

Although there has been a 55.2 percent increase over the past decade in the number of Asian faculty with MD degrees, the greatest proportion of this increase is among female Asian faculty who have more than doubled their representation. At the PhD level, Asian faculty show the highest increase (68.7 percent) which again is mainly due to the 130.2 percent increase in Asian women faculty, as compared to a 59.3 percent increase in Asian male faculty at this degree level. Overall, the number of Asian faculty members has increased by 58.3 percent and Other Hispanic faculty members by 38.7 percent.

The number for whom ethnicity is unknown has decreased by 12 percent since 1975. Individuals whose ethnic description is unknown include white as well as minority faculty members.

Changes in Distribution of Faculty Within Department

From 1978 through 1985 there has been a decline in the percentage of all full-time faculty in the departments of basic science (Table 6). The growth in full-time faculty has mainly been in the clinical departments: 69.7 percent of the total faculty in 1978 compared to 74.4 percent in 1985.

Minority Faculty Distribution

The representation of underrepresented minority faculty in basic science departments declined between 1975 and 1985, except in departments of microbiology and "other basic" departments (Table 7).

In 1985, the departments of obstetrics/gynecology have the highest percentage of underrepresented minority faculty (5.2 percent), as was the case in 1981. Representation of these groups in the departments of dermatology and family practice closely follows at 5.1 percent. In 1985, for the first time, the greatest participation of underrepresented minority faculty occurs in the departments of other health professions where they represent 6.6 percent of the faculty.

The five departments which had the highest representation of black faculty in 1981 were obstetrics/gynecology, family practice, psychiatry, administration and public health. In 1985, the participation of black faculty has remained constant in the departments of obstetrics/gynecology at 3.6 percent. Representation increased in the departments of family practice and public health, but a decrease is seen in the departments of psychiatry and administration.

As mentioned earlier, the overall representation of this group of faculty has remained at 2.7 percent over the past decade, with changes in departmental representation fluctuating over the years measured by tenths of a percentage point.

The decrease in representation in the primary basic science departments is not shared by Asian faculty. They show an increase in representation in all of the departments except biochemistry (Table 8). Since 1975, Asian faculty have tripled their representation in the clinical departments of physical medicine, and in the departments of psychiatry their representation has doubled. Their representation in the departments of opthalmology has increased by one-third.

Faculty members of the "Other Hispanic" ethnic group show little change in their representation over the decade in the basic science departments, except for the departments of microbiology, where they have doubled their participation. A decrease in representation is seen in six of the 15 clinical departments, most notably in the departments of anesthesiology and family practice. They have, however, doubled their representation (now 1.2 percent) in departments of public health.

It should be noted that the category of unknown ethnic group (Table 8) can affect changes in any of the ethnic groups, including white faculty representation, and although in most cases the percentage whose ethnicity is unknown is less in 1985 than in previous years, there are some exceptions. In the departments of dermatology, physical medicine, and other clinical departments, the percentage whose ethnicity is unknown is greater in 1985 than in 1975. Fluctuations also exist between these time periods; specifically, they occur in 1978 in the departments of dermatology, opthalmology, orthopedic surgery, psychiatry and surgery.

Distribution of Women Faculty

The representation of women faculty in basic science departments has continued to increase as it has in all clinical departments (Table 9).

Throughout the past decade, the greatest participation of women faculty has been not in either the basic or clinical science departments, but in the departments of other health professions where they have represented 59.5 percent of the faculty (Table 10).

Table 11 displays departments in which women have the greatest representation within the basic and clinical sciences. This table also denotes the degree type of the women faculty within these six departments. The representation of women is greater among faculty who do not hold doctoral degrees than among MD or PhD faculty. Even in pediatrics, a department in which women have traditionally had greater representation, women make up only 26.7 percent of the MD faculty as compared to 67.1 percent of faculty with non-doctoral degrees.

This preponderance of women faculty in the non-doctoral category is reflected in the rank distribution by sex in departments of pediatrics (Section I: Table I). Only 10.7 percent of the women in pediatrics are professors, while 29.8 percent of the men hold this rank. The highest fraction of women in this department is at the rank of assistant professor where they represent 37.3 percent.

Faculty Composition at Newly Developed and Established Medical Schools

Prior to analysis of the data for the newly developed and established schools, it was expected that the fraction of women faculty might be greater at the more recently developed schools. However, the assumption is not borne out by the data. The percentage of the faculty who are women is less at the newly developed schools (15.0 percent) than at the established schools (18.2 percent).

Table 11 provides the degree distribution of women faculty at these two groups of schools for the six departments in which their representation is greatest at all schools. Table 10 shows that the fraction of women faculty at the newly established schools is slightly higher in the departments of microbiology, physiology, dermatology, family practice, surgery, "other basic" and "other clinical" sciences, social science and veterinary science. In this latter department, four of the five women faculty in the nation are located in the newly established schools.

The situation is similar for underrepresented minority faculty whose fraction is 26.4 percent at the newly developed schools compared to 30.4 percent at the established schools. However, higher representation of black female faculty is seen at the newly developed schools where 35.0 percent of the black faculty are women versus 31.9 percent at the established schools. Section III displays the summary of the faculty composition at these institutions.

Status of Rank Attainment for Male and Female Faculty

Female faculty representation at the rank of professor increased from 4.8 percent in 1975 to 6.0 percent in 1985.

Faculty rank attainment percentages within sex show that male faculty are fairly evenly distributed at the primary ranks: 32.1 percent professors, 32.9 percent assistant professors and 26.2 percent at the rank of associate professor.

Women faculty, on the other hand, show a considerable disparity in rank with 9.6 percent at the rank of professor, 47.4 percent at the rank of assistant professor and 20.0 percent at the rank of associate professor. Figure 1 shows distribution of rank for 1978 and 1985.

Figures 2 and 3 provide a perspective of the differences in rank attainment of men and women through a comparison of degree type with the same year of first faculty appointment (Section II: Tables IV, V, VI). This criterion equalizes some of the variables in rank attainment, but does not account for duration of specialty training that may have occurred prior to the year of appointment, especially among those holding MD degrees. If there is a disparity in duration of training in one group or another it would hinder upward mobility in rank attainment.

Tenure Status of Full-Time Faculty

Data on tenure status of total full-time faculty are provided in Section III, Table VII. This includes a summary of all faculty and all degree types; it displays tenure status by degree types as well. The tenure status of faculty is collected by three categories: tenured; on tenure track; and for faculty members whose appointment did not include an opportunity for tenure, not on tenure track.

The period of appointment prior to being eligible for tenure varies from six to eleven years, depending on the policy at the medical school or at the parent institution.

Data on tenure status are maintained in the Faculty Roster for all but 20 percent of the full-time faculty. Of the 52,464 faculty members, tenure status is maintained 42,173 members.[8]

Of the faculty for whom tenure data are available, 41.2 percent have tenure. By degree type, the greatest percentage of tenured faculty are those at the PhD level (49.4 percent), followed by faculty with MD degrees (39.7 percent).

Women faculty comprise 12.4 percent of the tenured PhD faculty and 7.4 percent of the tenured faculty with an MD degree. The smallest difference between men and women faculty in tenure status is found among faculty with a non-doctoral degree; the greatest disparity in tenure status is seen for faculty who hold an MD degree.

Table 12 provides the distribution of tenure status by degree for men and women faculty in 1985.

[8] Tenure status not available for 10,291 faculty which include 1,135 faculty whose rank is unknown, 57 faculty for whom sex is unknown and 9,099 faculty whose tenure status is unknown.
